

“He Loves Us Still” by Kirk Hunt*Jesus wept.*

John 11:35 KJV

Jesus is the eternal Son of our eternal God. He has always existed. He will go on for forever.

I agree with those who believe that Jesus involved Himself with God’s people long before His earthly ministry. Many Bible scholars maintain that the “captain of the Lord’s host” in Joshua 5 was Jesus. The 4th man in the furnace at Daniel 3 is widely said to be Jesus.

There were countless millennia and the untold millions who existed before His earthly ministry. All that time and all those lives should have given Jesus a deep reserve about the lives of men and women. The vast time and space from Creation alone should place a deep gulf between God and us.

Instead, the sight of Lazarus’ tomb brought our Savior to tears. Even with His purpose to bring the man back to life. Despite the limitless power at His command. Christ cried.

He loves you. He loves me. In the most human and common sense of the word, He cares about us. The master of all time and space is moved and impacted by our very human lives.

Never think for a moment that He does not feel toward and for you. Your life matters to Him. He feels for you.

Think: Jesus loves me fully, completely and affectionately.

Pray: “Lord, help me to live knowing Your love for me is eternal yet human.”

Copyright © March 2012, Kirk Hunt